OUR TOWN

The town of Gilead, (what is today's Grand Rapids) was plotted in 1833. In 1838, Irish and German immigrants began digging the Miami and Erie Canal to create an important water link for transportation and commerce. The first dam at the rapids was built to provide water for the canal town and a side cut (the part of the canal system that you run along during the race) was provided for Gilead. Gilead's name was changed to Grand Rapids in 1868. The coming of the railroads (including The Toledo, St. Louis and Western Railroad, often abbreviated TStL&W and commonly known as the Clover Leaf, whose railroad tracks you run over) spelled the end of the need for the canal system. There was not much canal traffic after 1910, but some boats traveled the canal until the early 1930's. The canal system had a series of locks. Ours was lock No. 9. Some work was done on this side cut portion of the canal during the WPA and the CCC days of the depression years of the 30's. One project was the building of Bluebell Island, the site of our finish line. Across the river, the Toledo Metroparks have restored the local part of the main section of the Miami and Erie Canal, while the Grand Rapids side cut and Bluebell Island make an interesting backdrop to Grand Rapids' historic downtown. After the race, we invite you to take a stroll through downtown, take in one of our great restaurants or visit our quaint shops.
